The Century Lot in full swing (Photo courtesy Matt Geller/SoCalMFVA)

A new food truck lot made its debut just in time for lunch today, but it's certainly not in Paul Koretz's council district.

The Century Lot is located at the Crowne Plaza near LAX (that's Rosendahl's CD11), and today has hosted nine of the city's mobile eateries: Worldfare, Don Chow's Tacos, The Buttermilk Truck, Kabob N Roll, Komodo Food, India Jones, The Nom Nom Truck, South Philly Experience, and Reggae Jerk Chicken.

The lot will operate on Tuesdays, according to organizer Matt Geller of the SoCalMFVA, and the schedule will be viewable here. [map]

I should have went for lunch today. the line-ups for the remainder of the month don't look as appealing.

rjh, i'm guessing the higher end trucks (as in today's list) are doing the 'wait and see' thing and will sign up for future days if they do well today.

Who would you like to see there? We were going to only have three trucks next week, but it was so successful, I think we're going to bump it up to 6...

Went down today at lunch. Nothing jumped out at me except for the Cheesesteaks--but they were very good. Pity they ran out of fries by 1:00 or so.

I'm glad to hear that this will be a regular occurrence--I thought this was a one-time thing. It's nice to see the LAX area get some food-truck lovin', considering about the only thing we around here--at least conveniently--is junk food, hotel food, or cafeteria food.

It was packed today around 12:45! Such a refreshing change from Trimana. Can't wait for the grilled cheese truck next week.

3 trucks aren't enough to be a draw. I think 6 trucks would be much better. The more, the merrier, and the wider variety of trucks to choose from.
